As we pursue the knowledge of the good, we unshackle ourselves from the chains of ignorance, leave the world of dimness and finally enter the light of wisdom. And so it is in Plato's Republic.

Our world of dimness is comparable to Plato's cave of shadows where those people possessing desirable traits which enable them to enter the class of silver finally are able to reach the stage of the philosopher kings. We will be forever indebted to our philosopher kings—the faculty—who have enriched our lives and have set us on that brilliant path of wisdom.

HAZEL B. MILEHAM

It would be impossible for those of us in the class of 1958 who have known and loved Miss Mileham to tell the story of our life at North Adams State Teachers College without including a tribute to her. Miss Mileham's warmth and generosity did much to brighten our college days and will live in our hearts throughout our future years.

EDMUND K. LUDDY

We, the class of 1958, shall not forget the friendly efficient manner of Mr. Luddy who succeeded Miss Mileham as our class advisor. He has always been willing to help us in any way as our advisor, teacher, and friend. We should like to express our appreciation for his assistance to the class.

STATE TEACHERS COLLEGE AT NORTH ADAMS

To the Class of 1958:
The past year has been one of considerable import for education.
The entire field has been, and still is being, critically questioned.
As new members of the teaching profession you and your work will be carefully scrutinized. I am confident that you will meet these standards. I believe your attitude toward real learning is well established. I feel that your aim is to teach your students so that each may achieve his potential.
This will be no easy task, but I have faith in your ability and determination.
I ask that God will bless you,
and I wish each of you great success.
Sincerely,
Eugene P. Freck
President

Class History

On a September morning in 1954, a timid group of students approached the portals of North Adams State Teachers College, where they hoped to shed the shackles that held them in the darkness of the cave of ignorance and enter the world of light, knowledge and wisdom. After a number of hesitant starts we finally caught a faint glimmer of light and thus began our slow, laborious ascent from the bottom of the cave.

Friday evening of our first week arrived and we shyly attended our first social event, which was a reception held in our honor. At the reception one of our members, Joan Dion, was named freshman Queen. Halloween loomed over the horizon and brought with it the responsibility of sponsoring a dance. The dance, which was a grand success, showed that with cooperation and work we could accomplish a great deal.

Other travelers ahead were beginning to be aware of us when Bunny and Annette were elected to the cheering squad and were chosen as queen and attendant respectively at the Winter Carnival.

November brought political rallies, discussions and the long awaited day when we elected our leaders to help us wend our way toward the glimmer of light. We chose Paul Nash, Bunny Wary, Ike Koza and Nancy Alsing.

One of the most memorable events was the Christmas Party, which was highlighted by the presentation by the student body of a beautiful leather chair to the retiring President, Dr. Grover C. Bowman. Although we had known Dr. Bowman for only a short time, we had already developed a deep respect and admiration for him.

This was the year of firsts. Dr. Freel began his first year as President of the college, the first Parents' day was held, Alter Natus was formed and we had our first experience with such things as "outside reading #1" and "horizontal questions." This was also the year when most of us met and some of us conquered the three-hour exam. In June we stopped on a ledge to rest before starting the next lap of our journey.

In September, 1955, we saw that many of our party, preferring other trails, had decided to go no further with us. The path leading to the light had become very steep but we felt that if we could reach the next ledge then we would, in all probability, achieve our goal. The reading of the Honor List at the beginning of the year indicated that the chains of ignorance were beginning to slacken, but those days in Dr. John's lab convinced us that we had a long way to go before they were broken.

We found that we had come back with a strong feeling of unity and we chose as our very capable leader Jack Murphy who was assisted by Denny Duquette, Jean Shepard and Shirley Sweet. The ray of light, which had increased in both size and intensity, shone upon the artistic efforts we made in the planning and decorating for the Sophomore Prom, which was highly acclaimed by all who attended it. Inspired by our success in this venture and driven by our creative urge, we produced "Minnie the Mermaid," who enhanced the Winter Carnival setting and led us to the first prize in the snow sculpturing contest. Not content with this honor, we became Stunt Night champions after demonstrating our acting ability in "Snow Drop and the Seven Drips."

Although it was a most enjoyable year, it was not entirely devoted to having fun. Scholastically this was the year for daily quizzes, books to be read, and papers to be written. We found that we had to work steadily or fall by the wayside. Sophomore Exams were a credit to some and a disappointment to others, as they showed us all our strengths and weaknesses in this struggle and proved that once again we ranked highest among the State Teachers Colleges. Arriving exhausted, but much wiser, at the next resting place, we paused to regain our strength before continuing our journey.

As we continued, we found that the path had grown quite narrow and presented new obstacles. It took time to adjust to the different conditions, but we were determined not to fall back into the darkness. Burton Albert, Bunny Wary, Jean Shepard and Shirley Sweet led the group through methods, demonstration lessons, and "happy time" classes. We soon became aware that "drill follows understanding" and that people "learn by doing." If the latter is true, we must have learned a great deal. We spent hours preparing units, maps, arithmetic devices, tachistoscopes, and flash cards.

We found time along the way to sponsor the Winter Carnival and present "Herman and Gertrude" on Stunt Night. The men gained recognition when they became the Intramural Champions in basketball while the quiet female population became well known as strains of harmonious flutophone selections were heard throughout the school.

Drama seemed to be one of our strong points that year, as five of our members, Paul Nash, Henry Reynolds, Alan Murray, Bunny Wary, and Nancy Alsing, lent their talents to the school play, "The Tender Trap." Nancy and Paul also received the distinction of being elected to the dramatic society, Delta Psi Omega, an honor bestowed upon a selected few thespians.

In May we had the honor of capping the seniors, who had finally reached the mouth of the cave and were ready to step forth into the light. When we had done this, we realized that we were truly on our way to the completion of our formal enlightening period.

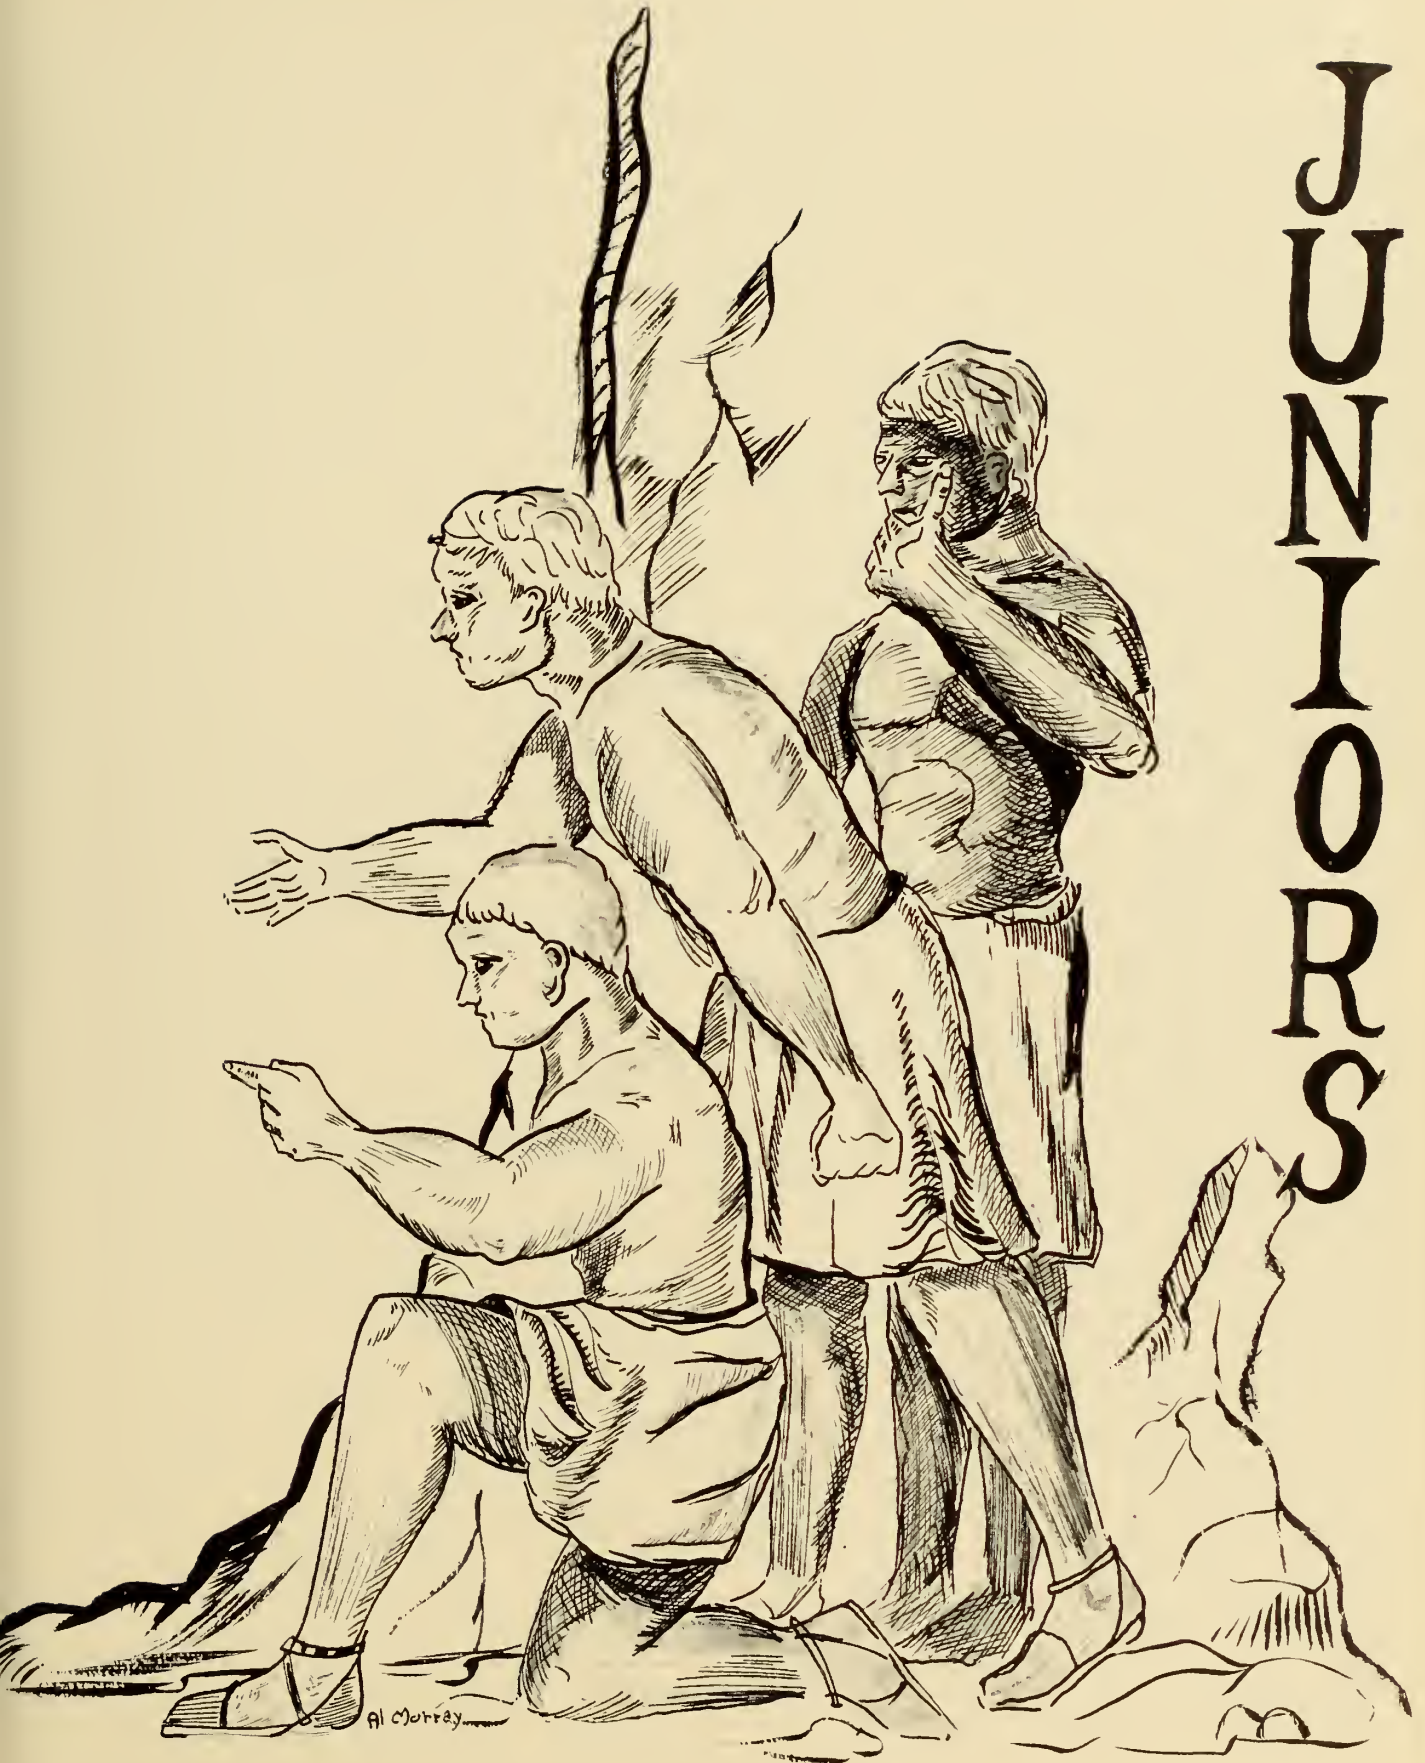

As we began the last and most exciting part of our journey, we struggled to overcome such obstacles as lesson plans, motivation, and registers—in blue-black ink. Realizing that we would need an unusually skillful leader, we chose Alan Murray. Alan's assistants for the year were Dick Stomski, Annette Haddad, and Jean Shepard.

Activities became our byword. Stunt night was quite successful but some of our members were not content with working on such a small scale and so Nancy Alsing, Burton Albert, and Alan Murray lent their talents and abilities to the Drama Club production, "The Hasty Heart." May 14 brought Cap and Gown Day and we suddenly realized that we would soon be stepping out into the unknown region beyond the mouth of the cave. We were eager to learn what awaited us but hesitant about leaving the security we had known. Time seemed to have sprouted wings as we flew through our party at the Springs, the Senior Banquet, our last exams, and then graduation.

We began to think about finding positions and while we looked forward to new places and new friends, we were saddened by the thought that we would no longer be together as a class.

On June 8, 1958, our struggle temporarily ceased as we boldly stepped forth from the cave of ignorance to the edge of the world of light!

Shalom

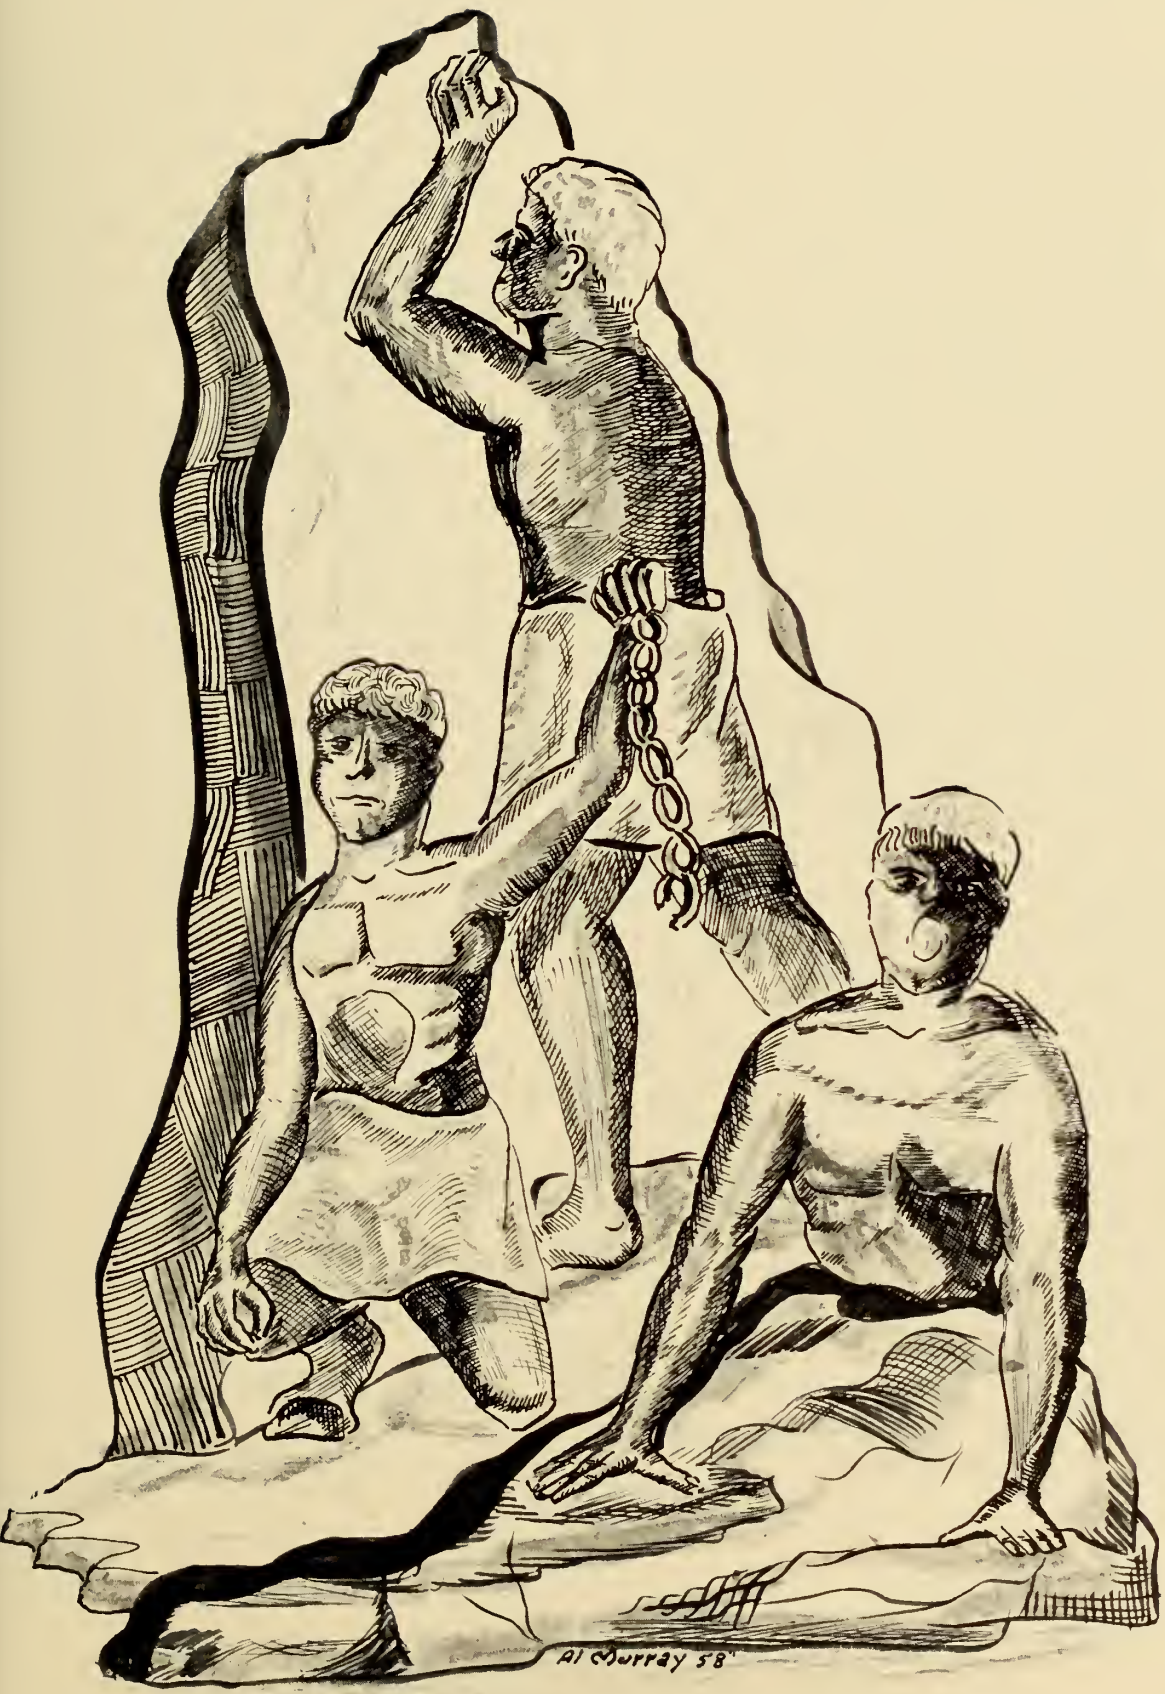

*Our campus is a postage stamp affair
Made smaller yet by dipping tiers of rolling green
And spiny hedges grown fat and square.
Some decent blacktop eats up more of it
Carving a Greek Pi and a Hebrew Beyt in the grassy floor
In a ritual show of beauty's wit.
Rising from this tiny patch of verdancy
Rears College Hall on stony haunches, and poses there
Like a Grande Dame rusty with dignity.
So far not too much, I'm afraid
At least to those who take their measures by rule and count
And only know worth by what is paid.*

But once within those cavernous portals
Some magic conjures the immortals,
And a witchery in the printed pages
Revives the sighs of a thousand ages.
The breath of heroes stirs again
Louder than their battles' din.
The smiles of Helen, and the songs of the siren
Emerge full-bodied from the soul of a lectern.
White-togaed visionaries stride the top hall,
Though out of this world, they're the most real of all.
They delve in pure thought, these classical sages,
And speak of the good life in ethical phrases.
And Logicians' circles and Freudian dreams
Compose themselves near Utopian schemes.
Comte makes a pattern of social research;
And a Pieta hangs in a Romanesque Church.
The scratch of a stylus, an harmonic gale
When Debussy's whole-tone meets Brahms' modal scale.
To Asia, at last, her academic due—
Afghanistanism yields to Pandit Nehru.
Newton's three laws of gravity and mass
Reduce all the others to "keep off the grass."
Algebra, trig, and tests and measures
Are the pearls of State Teachers' abstract treasures.
Curriculum, methods, and practice teaching—
It's Dewey, versus dogmatic preaching.
Gargoyles leer, and Bucephalus prances,
While a diaphanous Duncan creates modern dances.
The Tower of Pisa, and Galileo reckons
Bodies fall thirty-two feet per second, each second.
Wherever we look, in College Hall's sphere,
Space seethes with life, and visions appear.
And every one's real, and everything's true,
Compelling our notice, expanding our view.

*Our college is a postage stamp, which so
Extends our scope in space and time, that Betelgeuse is right next door
And the Primal Sludge is but a wink ago.*

Basketball

In the past few years, North Adams State Teachers College was considered the last resort in basketball among the colleges in Western Massachusetts. However, time has changed and with it so has our major sport. The recently completed campaign bears true witness to this spectacular change. In a real sense North Adams, record-wise, was one of the most victorious college teams in Western Massachusetts during the '57-'58 season. Moreover, affirming the superiority of the team are the resounding wins over such stalwarts as New Britain and Willimantic.

It was because of such triumphs that we completed our season with an overall record of eleven wins and five losses, while our New England Conference record stood at an admirable ten wins—four losses. The crowning point of the season was reached when North Adams scored one of the greatest victories in the history of the college by surprising New Britain State Teachers College 67-55. Yet we found ourselves at the close of the season losing, to the Connecticut five, a berth in the N.E.T.C. play-offs.

All the laurels, however, must be bestowed upon the coach and the team, whose starting five proved to be a well-knit combination. Under the direction of our expert coach, Hyman Patashnick, we gained good board control from our rebounding aces, Paul Farmer and Fred LaFave, while Arnie Busold and George St. Pierre provided an excellent scoring combination. Joe Zavattaro assumed the role of play-maker and floor general. Assisting in many ways in the conquests was the strong reserve which proved to be the determining factor in this year's success.

In the final analysis the 1957-1958 season brought North Adams into the limelight of competitive basketball among the New England teachers colleges. The results achieved during this season not only attest to the potential of the team but they also indicate great things in the future for North Adams State Teachers College. Thus, in our four years, North Adams has once again become one of the foremost contenders in New England Teachers Conference basketball.

Baseball

“NORTH ADAMS DOWNS CASTLETON 11-1!!!”

These headlines, which blared across the North Adams Transcript, announced the arrival of baseball at State Teachers College after a lapse of more than a decade. Under the guidance of Joe Zavattaro, a former Pittsburgh Pirates farm system player, the team initiated its rather short season by defeating Castleton twice and losing a thriller to the Williams College Freshmen.

As it awaits entrance into the New England Teachers College Baseball Conference, the team is fast becoming a strong outfit and formidable competitor.
